Soviet reversal of charges against Anna Louise Strong seen as gesture to Pelping: Research reversal of the charges of espionage made against Anna Louise Strong in 1949 appears to be a gesture to the Chinese Communists, whose cause she vociferously championed for years.

dies Strong had frequently proclaimed Reiping's independence from Moscow and had advanced the "Yonan way" as the pattern for colonial Asia. She was arrested and expelled from the USS in 1949 while attempting to return to North China after a visit to Tito. Prague radio hinted at the time that she was a Yugoslav spy—a peculiarly sensitive charge in view of her planned trip to rejoin the Chinese Communists as they made their final push for victory in China.

Miss Strong's exponeration at this time may be intended to show that Moscow is sensitive to Peiping's feeling of independence. It follows closely Moletov's statement elevating Peiping to the role of co-leader with Moscow of the Socialist camp. It may also have been published during the negotiations now being carried on in Moscow between Yugoslavia and Peiping to show that the USSR has no fear of Titoism in China.

This move also may have internal Soviet implications, since the original announcement on hims Strong blazed her presence in the USER on the "negligence of certain foreign relations officials," a reference which may have been sized at Molotov.
